

JAMIE, a teenager, any race, any gender

A smart, hesitant young adult with an appreciation for history and ancestry. They are initially tense and on high alert when Cam convinces them to sneak into an abandoned theater, but after finding a bunch of historical artifacts, and even a photograph of their grandmother, they find an odd sense of home in a place that was originally ominous.

CAM, a teenager, any race, any gender

Cam doesn't necessarily think before they do things. After they convince Jamie to sneak into an abandoned theatre, they develop a curiosity about the mysterious objects they encounter. They're an explorer, but they lack caution and have yet to discover the importance of history and legacy. Surrounded by the magic of theatre, they find an appreciation for culture, and even ask Jamie if they can come over for dinner and meet their grandmother to learn more about the abandoned art of theatre.